Federal Officials Lift FEMA Grant Freeze

The Trump administration said on Thursday the Federal Emergency Management Agency had made more than $2.2 billion in payments to a group of states over the past three weeks, meaning it was in compliance with a judge's order blocking an earlier sweeping pause of federal grants, loans and other financial aid.

U.S. District Judge John McConnell in Providence, Rhode Island, ruled on April 4 that Republican President Donald Trump's administration had violated his order because FEMA had halted disbursements since early February for a "manual review" of grants without any clear end date.
